

Abstract of the Disclosure

A dispenser for dispensing pulverulent coating material includes an opening through which the pulverulent material is discharged and a conduit through which the pulverulent material is transported from a source to the opening. The conduit 5 includes a section having a generally rectangular cross section transverse to the general direction of flow of the pulverulent material through the conduit.